

From High Point: Back to Basics is Highly Recommended

This spring's trends at the influential High Point Market travel back in time and glam it up while indicating a return to simplicity.

BY GRACE COOPER

May 10, 2017

PHOTO COURTESY UNIVERSAL FURNITURE

Retro is Here to Stay

With a little bit of something old, and a whole lot of something new, the bi-annual High Point furnishings market in High Point, N.C. provided a look at the coming trends in interior design.

The top styles are showcased by the market's hand-selected "Style Spotters," interior design experts who document the hottest trends at High Point. At the spring market, held from April 22-26, they say they saw a lot of new twists on classic designs, as well as a return to traditional and timeless style.

Last fall, the High Point Market took a trip back in time to the 1970s and '80s with some throwback styles. This season is no different, thanks to colorful patterns and vintage fashion. "Retro nods to the '70s and '80s will continue to influence 2017," say Michelle Wiebe, High Point Market Style Spotter Emeritus and president of Studio M Interior Design in Tampa, Fla.